Mother's Day Cake

by Anita Amin

For Mother's Day I tried to bake
An eleven layer chocolate cake,
One layer for each of the years
Mom wiped away my tears and fears.

But when I burned my mother's treat,
I threw my hands up in defeat.
I cried and told Mom what I'd done.
She smiled. "We'll make another one."

She streaked some flour on my nose.
From that a flour fight arose.
We laughed, then made that second cake,
Chit-chatted while we watched it bake.

Mom's gift was perfect - and quite tall.
I iced on top, "Best Mom of All."
It made Mom laugh. "I've got to say,
This has been the best Mother's Day!"
