Dinosaur Graveyard

by Kelly Hashway

Jackie hopped out of the car and ran up to her grandparents, who were waiting at the front door of the farmhouse. She was spending the day at the farm while her parents went to a wedding. She waved goodbye and wondered what interesting things she'd get to see.

Grandma Holland raised an eyebrow. "Arthur, why don't you take Jackie out to the dinosaur graveyard?"

were dinosaur bones discovered on the farm! Jackie imagined herself digging in the dirt and discovering a new species of dinosaur, even bigger than a Tyrannosaurus Rex. "Let's go!"

They drove the tractor to a field at the back of the farm. The grass at the edge of the field was taller than Jackie. A neck and head peeked over the grass.

"Whoa! Is that a real dinosaur?"

Grandpa laughed again. "It was to me."

Jackie pushed through the tall grass and saw a bunch of weird looking machines. Each one looked a little bit like a dinosaur. A few had long necks just like a Brachiosaurus.

"This is old farm equipment. There aren't any real dinosaur bones here, are there?" Jackie asked with a sigh.

"No, Jackie. But these machines have been around for a long time. I don't use them. In fact, no one's used them since my grandfather."

"Then why do you keep them?"

"Because when I was even younger than you, I used to come to this farm and play in this field. I was the only boy in a world of dinosaurs."

Jackie still looked disappointed.

"All it takes is a little imagination. Why just a moment ago, you thought this machine was a real dinosaur," her grandfather said, patting the rusty metal.

Jackie
Brachiosaurus too."

Jackie smiled and led Grandpa Holland down the line of tall grass in search of more dinosaurs.
