Road Trip

by Kelly Hashway

Daniel was so excited he was almost bouncing in the backseat of the car. It was his first trip to Disney World, and he couldn't wait to get there. Only that's exactly what he would have to do. Wait. For countless hours.

At first it wasn't too bad. He played all the silly car games he could think of with his brother Emmet and his parents. They found all the letters of the

"Are we—"

"No, Daniel," his father said. "Please try to be patient. You were the one who picked the vacation spot this year. We told you it would be a long drive."

"Yeah, but this is so boring!" Daniel whined.

"It's more than boring," Emmet said. "It's torture."

"You want to hear about torture?" Dad asked. "When I was about your age, Daniel, Grandma and Grandpa took your aunt Jan and me to Disney World. About halfway there, Grandpa ran over a nail and we got a flat tire. Luckily we had a spare, but it took forever to change the tire because Grandpa dropped the lug nuts and they rolled into the highway. We had to flag down a police car to close the right lane so we could get the lug nuts."

Daniel laughed, picturing Grandpa running across the road looking for the lug nuts. "Grandpa must have been really mad!"

"Oh, he wasn't happy, but it gets worse," Dad said. "About fifty miles later, the engine died. Grandpa had to walk three miles to get to a pay phone and call for a tow truck."

"Why didn't he use his cell phone?" Daniel asked.

Dad laughed. "We didn't have cell phones back then."

"What happened next?" Daniel asked.

"We had to pay for a cheap motel room for the night while the car was in the shop being fixed. The hotel was filthy and the shower only had cold water. Even the diner next door was terrible. They served cold, runny eggs."

"You must have been happy to get back on the road," Daniel said.
