by Kelly Hashway

Lisa walked into the chorus room with a smile on her face. The class was auditioning for parts in the holiday musical. Lisa loved to sing and this was her chance to get one of the lead roles.

Mr. Beckman spoke quietly to her.

Mr. Beckman said, "you're all excited to audition, but before we do that, we have an announcement."

Lisa sat up straight. Was there going to be a solo?

"This year we are opening and closing the show with a very special performance by a select number of students," Mr. Beckman said.

Lisa squeezed the sheet music in her hands. It wasn't a solo performance, but it was still a chance to be featured as one of the best singers.

"These individuals will be dressed in distinctive costumes and will set the stage for the rest of the show," Mr. Beckman continued.

Lisa leaned forward, eager to hear more.

"I've already selected the students who will be part of this featured act," Mr. Beckman said. "Brandon, Adrianna, Tina, Colin, Derek, and Lisa, would you come up front please?"

"Yes!" Lisa yelled, rushing to the front of the room.

Mr. Beckman removed a costume from the supply closet. "You six will be our wooden soldiers!"

Lisa stared at the huge hat complete with a chinstrap. "No one is going to recognize us wearing those!"

"Don't worry, Lisa. You're names will be listed in the program under 'Wooden Soldiers'," Mr. Beckman said.

"But even my own parents won't be able to tell which soldier is me!"

"Lisa, this is a very special honor," Mr. Beckman said. "I selected the top students in the class to open the show for us. You'll need to learn a special march and dance, but if you don't want to be a soldier, I can assign the part to someone

"Can we start practicing our march?" Lisa asked.

Mr. Beckman smiled. "Yes. I'll teach you the march while the rest of the class practices for their auditions."

"Sounds great," Lisa said.

This is actually based on a true story from when I was in third grade. I was a wooden soldier in our holiday musical, and I wasn't exactly happy about it at first. I hope you enjoyed it.
