Many people like to eat me. I give you protein which helps you stay well and grow.

I am a legume. That means I am a relative of peas and beans. All of us legumes have pods.

I grow on a plant. Yellow flowers grow on the plant. After awhile, parts of the yellow flowers drop to the ground and grow down into the soil. Those flower parts in the soil grow to become me!

Do you have any nicknames?
I do. I am sometimes called a groundnut, a goober, or a goober-pea.
I am a peanut.

People use me mostly for food. They eat me like a nut and I am often mixed with almonds, cashews, filberts, and Brazil nuts. These true nuts grow on trees, not in the ground like I do.

People often make me into a spread. They put me on bread with jelly – Mmm, Mmm, delicious!
Please log in or register to download the printable version of this worksheet.
What Am I?

By Linda Andersen

Many people like to eat me. I give you protein which helps you stay well and grow.

I am a legume. That means I am a relative of peas and beans. All of us legumes have pods.

I grow on a plant. Yellow flowers grow on the plant. After awhile, parts of the yellow flowers drop to the ground and grow down into the soil. Those flower parts in the soil grow to become me!

Do you have any nicknames? I do. I am sometimes called a ‘groundnut,’ a ‘goober,’ or a ‘goober-pea.’

I can be an ingredient in soap, paint, and medicine. My shells are sometimes put in animal food and kitty litter. A black American named George Washington Carver figured out about 300 uses for me.

People use me mostly for food. They eat me like a nut and I am often mixed with almonds, cashews, filberts, and Brazil nuts. These true nuts grow on trees, not in the ground like I do.

People often make me into a spread. They put me on bread with jelly – Mmm, Mmm, delicious!

What am I?
Many people like to eat me. I give you protein which helps you stay well and grow.

I am a legume. That means I am a relative of peas and beans. All of us legumes have pods.

I grow on a plant. Yellow flowers grow on the plant. After awhile, parts of the yellow flowers drop to the ground and grow down into the soil. Those flower parts in the soil grow to become me!

Do I call ‘groundnut’ or ‘goober’ my nickname? Sometimes I do. The famous black American named George Washington Carver figured out about 300 uses for me.

People use me mostly for food. They eat me like a nut and I am often mixed with almonds, cashews, filberts, and Brazil nuts. These true nuts grow on trees, not in the ground like I do.

People often make me into a spread. They put me on bread with jelly – Mmm, Mmm, delicious!

What am I?

Answer: I am a peanut.