Commonly Confused Words

The word pass can be a verb or a noun.
- example of pass as a verb: Please pass the peas.
- example of pass as a noun: You can use a hall pass to go to the library.

Passed is the past tense of the verb to pass.
- example of a sentences with passed: The quarterback passed the football.

Past can be a noun, adverb or adjective, but it can never be a verb.
- example of past as a noun: We will read about the past in our history book.
- example of past as an adverb: You walked past the park.
- example of past as an adjective: Over the past year, I’ve learned to sew.

Write the word pass, passed, or past in each blank to correctly complete the sentence.

1. My brothers and I made a scrapbook of all the things our family did in the ________________ year.

2. Luis shouted, “Let’s celebrate! I ________________ my science test.”

3. Mara waved at the crowds as she ran ________________ the finish line.

4. We ________________ Michael’s house when we drove past the school.

5. Mom said, “Please ________________ the mashed potatoes.”

6. “Stinked is not a word. Stank is the ________________ tense of stink,” Arya explained.

7. I got a free ________________ to the amusement park when I ________________ classes this past semester.

8. “We can learn many things from the ________________,” said our social studies teacher.

9. Please say hello when you ________________ by me in the hallway.

10. Look forward to the future, enjoy the present, but remember the ________________.

Super Teacher Worksheets - www.superteacherworksheets.com
Past, Pass, and Passed

The word pass can be a verb or a noun.
- example of pass as a verb: Please pass the peas.
- example of pass as a noun: You can use a hall pass to go to the library.

Passed is the past tense of the verb to pass.
- example of a sentence with passed: The quarterback passed the football.

Past can be a noun, adverb or adjective, but it can never be a verb.
- example of past as a noun: We will read about the past in our history book.
- example of past as an adverb: You walked past the park.
- example of past as an adjective: Over the past year, I’ve learned to sew.

Write the word pass, passed, or past in each blank to correctly complete the sentence.

1. My brothers and I made a scrapbook of all the things our family did in the past year.
2. Luis shouted, “Let’s celebrate! I passed my science test.”
3. Mara waved at the crowds as she ran past the finish line.
4. We passed Michael’s house when we drove past the school.
5. Mom said, “Please pass the mashed potatoes.”
6. “Stinked is not a word. Stank is the past tense of stink,” Arya explained.
7. I got a free pass to the amusement park when I passed all my classes this past semester.
8. “We can learn many things from the past,” said our social studies teacher.
9. Please say hello when you pass by me in the hallway.
10. Look forward to the future, enjoy the present, but remember the past.