While Kamilah was helping her grandpa organize the attic, she discovered a box stuffed with papers. Stories, essays, poems—all signed by an author named J.F.F. The topmost poem was only four scribbled lines.

In the early hours of dawn,
my hunger's more than I can take.
With cry as sharp as children's screams,
I make my master wake.

"I wrote that one about my old cat, Garnet," Grandpa said over her shoulder. Kamilah turned to him. "You're J.F.F.? But those aren't your initials!" "Nope," he agreed. "But I did write all these just for fun."
