Anna's Kite

by Anita Amin

On a sunny afternoon in the park, Anna was flying her kite. She watched it climb higher and higher into the sky. Her kitten watched the kite in the air.

"Look at my kite, Kitty!"

Meow. Kitty ran to a tall tree.

"Oh, no!" Anna cried. Her kite was flying too close to the tree!

"Maybe the wind will blow my kite down." Anna waited a while. But the wind didn't blow her kite down.

Anna picked up a stick. "Maybe this stick will knock my kite down." Anna threw the stick upward. The stick did not go high enough to knock her kite down.

Anna frowned. "I can't climb up there. The kite is too high."

Meow. Kitty rubbed against Anna's leg.

Anna looked down at Kitty. "But maybe you can climb up there."

So Kitty sprang from branch to branch. When she reached the kite, she swiped at it and knocked it down.

"Great job, Kitty!" Anna smiled. Now, Anna could fly her kite again.
