The Great Easter Egg Hunt
by Anita Amin

On Easter, Ian and his family went to the park. It was crowded. Everyone was there for the Great Easter Egg Hunt.

A lady blew a horn. “Let the egg hunt begin!” she shouted.

“It’s time to hunt for eggs!” Ian cried. He raced forward, looking for Easter eggs. He wanted to get as many as he could.

His little sister, Amy, lagged behind. Mom and Dad helped Amy look for eggs.

Ian found a green egg in the grass. He found a yellow egg in a bed of yellow flowers. He found a red egg next to a red stone. He put the eggs in his basket.

As Ian found more eggs, he kept hearing Amy say, “Mine.”

“But I thought her basket was full!” Ian told his parents. “She kept saying, ‘Mine.’ Didn’t she say that when she found an egg?”

Dad laughed. “No, she said that when someone picked up an egg. Toddlers always say that when they see something they want.”

“I’m sorry,” Amy said again.

Ian looked at his basket and then at Amy. She didn’t have many eggs, and she was his baby sister. Finally, he smiled and gave his basket to Amy. “Yes, yours,” Ian told Amy.
