A Walk Through the Rainforest
By Anita N. Amin

Emma and her brother, Alex, took a walk with Grandpa through the woods behind their house. Bamboo trees creaked in the summer breeze. Only a few patches of blue sky showed through the canopy of green leaves overhead.

“Let’s pretend we’re in a rainforest,” Emma said. “Maybe we’ll see a rainforest animal.” She studied the carpet of tangled ivy, moss, and crumbled leaves for any sign.

“Look!” Alex cried. “A rainforest frog!” A tiny frog, the size of a quarter, hopped past them.

“That frog is small—just like Nina’s frog,” Emma said. “Where are you, Finnigan?” a voice called out. It was their friend, Nina. She ran toward them with an open jar. “Have you seen my frog? He hopped out of my jar.”

They chased after Nina’s frog. Finally, Nina caught her frog and popped it back in its jar. Nina joined Emma and Alex. They kept exploring.

A moment later, Alex cried, “Look! A rainforest bird!”

“That bird has a tiny roll of paper tied to one of its legs—just like Rosie’s pigeon,” Emma said.

“It is my pigeon!” Rosie said behind them. She was on a walk with her dad. “It’s taking a note to my aunt down the street.”

They watched the bird fly away.
Rosie joined Emma, Alex, and Nina. They kept exploring.

Meow. Ruff, ruff.

“Look!” Alex cried. “A rainforest cat and dog!”

An orange kitten streaked past them, chased by a dog with brown spots.

Their friends, Anna and Ian, ran onto the path.

“Kitty!” Anna cried, chasing after her kitten.

“Sir Wags-a-Lot!” Ian cried, chasing after his dog.

Finally, Anna caught her kitten and Ian caught his dog.

Anna and Ian joined Emma, Alex, Nina, and Rosie. They kept exploring. They didn’t find more animals but they had fun pretending.
