One cold frosty morning, Bear woke up from the middle of his long winter sleep. He wandered outside his den and noticed that the lake had frozen over.

“Good thing I’m not made of water,” he said, “or I’d turn to ice.”

“But you are made of water,” said Hare, who was tumbling around in a snow bank beside him. “Over half your body is water.”

“You must be fooling,” said Bear. He looked at his body. His arms didn’t look like water. His legs didn’t look like water. His paws didn’t look like water.

“Think of all your blood,” said Hare. “Your blood’s made of water. In fact, all your parts are made of cells, and cells are made of water.”

“See, when you shake like that, your body’s using energy to make more heat and warm you up.”

“I know a better way to warm up,” said Bear. “Let’s go inside.”

They stomped into Hare’s house. Bear relaxed by the fireplace. A few minutes later, the snow on his fur melted and dripped into puddles on the floor.

A teapot whistled on the stove. Bear looked at the teapot and saw a thick stream of steam shooting into the air.

“How are you feeling now?” Hare asked as he brought Bear a cup of chamomile tea.

“I’m still afraid,” Bear said as he cuddled the steaming teacup in his paws.

“Don’t be silly,” Hare told him. “Even though you’re made of water, you know you aren’t going to turn to ice.”

“I know,” Bear said. “But now I’m afraid I’ll evaporate.”

Bear and Hare Warm Up
by Neal Levin

In the story, “Bear and Hare Warm Up,” Bear is afraid of freezing because he doesn't understand how an animal’s body is different from a body of water. Once Hare explains to him that an animal’s body creates heat to warm up, Bear is no longer afraid of freezing.

Think of something in your life that you used to be afraid of but aren’t anymore. Describe it on the lines below. What helped you overcome your fear of that thing? Did learning more information about it help? Explain in detail.
1. In the story, “Bear and Hare Warm Up,” why does Bear have a hard time believing his body is made up of mostly water? b
   a. Bear doesn't hear any water sloshing around inside of him.
