What Is the Constitution?

By Anita Kim Venegas

America was a new country after the Revolutionary War. The country needed a central government and a set of laws for people to live by in order for it to become a strong, unified nation. During the war, colonies would not send money or supplies to provide support for soldiers in other colonies. If soldiers were in battle in Pennsylvania, the government of Virginia would not send food or supplies. After the war, each colony began to make its own laws and govern its own people.

tables to discuss how to form a republic. A republic is a type of government where the power is held by the people and their elected representatives. No other country in the world was a republic in 1787. Each colony had authority to create laws for themselves. However, representatives from each colony would work together to create federal laws that all citizens would follow.

The most important decision they had to make was how many votes each colony would have when it was time to vote on federal topics such as taxes or education.

Representatives from the smaller colonies were concerned that the larger colonies would have more votes on issues in government.

Throughout the hot and humid summer, the men created a set of laws to rule the country. Everyone decided it was important to keep the meetings secret. The tall windows on both sides of Independence Hall were hammered shut with nails to prevent Another decision the men needed to make was to choose a leader; someone needed to lead the country and speak with leaders of other countries. They knew they did not want a king. They called this position "president". They voted for George Washington to be the first president of the United States. He represented all the citizens of the new nation.

In September of 1787, they finished writing the Constitution and proposed it to the colonies to ratify, or approve. As each colony approved the Constitution, the colony became a state. The Constitution was approved by nine colonies in the summer of 1788. The first ten amendments, or additions to the Constitution, were made in 1791. They are called the Bill of Rights.

What Is the Constitution?

By Anita Kim Venegas

In the article, "What Is the Constitution?" you learned that it was important for the newly independent nation to develop a central government and a set of laws that applied to all the colonies. It took an entire summer and fifty-five colonists, but by September of 1787, the American Constitution was written.

On the lines below, describe several challenges the writers of the Constitution faced when drafting the document.

Base your answer on the information from the article.
