Have you ever heard the expression "gotta buck"? It refers to the one dollar bill, and although nobody seems to know how "buck" came to mean a dollar, the term has been around for a very long time. We call bills like the dollar ($1, $5, $10, $20, $50, and $100) paper money, but they’re really not paper. They are made out of material, just like clothes, with tiny blue and red fibers running through them. Have you ever left a dollar in your jeans just before your mom washed them? I’ll bet the dollar always came out okay, didn’t it? That’s because this special material is printed with a secret kind of waterproof ink that won’t run.

If you have a dollar bill, take it out so you can look at it as we go along. If you don’t, you can use the picture below.

The front of the bill is called the obverse side. To the right of George Washington, you’ll see the U.S. Treasury Department Seal. On top of the seal is a scale that represents justice. In the center of the seal is a chevron with thirteen stars. Beneath that is the key to represent authority and trust.

Now turn the bill over. What do you see?
On the reverse side, you will see two circles which represent the Great Seal of the United States. Let’s first talk about the left-hand circle. This is actually the back, or reverse side of the Great Seal.

You’ll see a pyramid with the front lighted, but the Western side is dark. That dark side means we didn’t know much about the West at that time. The Pyramid is uncapped, which means the U.S. was a new country and wasn’t completely explored yet.

Inside the capstone of the pyramid is the “all-seeing eye”, an ancient symbol of religion. Benjamin Franklin, who helped design the seal, believed that one man couldn’t build a nation all by himself, but a group of men, with the help of God, could do anything.

The Latin words above and below the pyramid mean “God has favored our undertaking,” and “A new order has begun.” At the base of the Pyramid is the Roman numeral for the year 1776, the year the Declaration of Independence was signed.

Now look at the right-hand circle. This is the front, or obverse side of the Great Seal. In the eagle’s beak are the Latin words, “E PLURIBUS UNUM.” This means, “one nation made of many states.”

Stars and stripes are symbols for our country you’re probably familiar with. On the Great seal, there are stars over the eagle’s head and stripes on the shield that make up its body.

The eagle holds an olive branch in his right talon, which means that our country strives for peace. It also holds arrows in his left talon, which means we are willing to fight to protect that peace. Notice that the eagle’s head is looking to the left, in the same direction of the olive branch. This shows that our country prefers peace over war.

Have you noticed the number thirteen comes up a lot? Some people consider 13 an unlucky number, but it’s really a symbolic number for our country. The United States was started from 13 colonies and there were 13 original states. Our flag even has 13 red and white stripes on it. On the reverse side of the one-dollar bill, you will notice lots of thirteens:

- 13 stars above the eagle
- 13 bars on the shield
- 13 leaves on the olive branch
- 13 steps on the pyramid
- 13 olives on the olive branch
- 13 arrows
- 13 pearls next to the seal and the pyramid

So the next time one of your friends talks about how the number 13 is unlucky, ask him to take out a dollar bill, and show him what thirteen really means to an American!
