My red convertible was due for an oil change, so I came to this state, known for its rich oil reserves. I drove into the Lone Star Oil Change Shop. A tall woman with a cowboy hat changed my oil and told me all about her state.

She told me that her state was a separate country between 1836 and 1846. Then it became the largest state in the US. They were enjoying their status as the largest state until Alaska was granted statehood in 1958.

When she was finished with my car, she gave me directions to Galveston. She said I could go swimming in the Gulf of Mexico.

Do you know which state I’m visiting?
Answer: Texas

~PREVIEW~

Please log in or register to download the printable version of this worksheet.