Recommendations for Lesson:

Before presenting this persuasive writing prompt to students, you may choose to have a class discussion to present both sides of the issue.

Arguments in favor of allowing cell phones in school might include:

- Phones enable students to contact parents if they forgot to bring something to school or if they need to arrange transportation.
- Smart phones can be used as a learning tool. Students can use the Internet to look up information.
- Phones are a harmless form of entertainment and communication for use during lunch, study hall, recess, bus rides, or other down times.

Arguments against allowing cell phones in school might include:

- Phones are expensive pieces of equipment that can be lost or stolen.
- Students could cheat with a phone.
- Phones are a distraction. Students could text or play games while a teacher is trying to teach.

When writing their persuasive essays, students should be encouraged to include a topic sentence (or topic paragraph) stating their opinion, followed by persuasive details to support their point of view. Writers can also acknowledge the opinions of those who might have a different view, and follow up with an argument to make their case.
